

Home > Enterprise Applications > Database Management

NEWS

Twitter growth prompts switch from MySQL to 'NoSQL' database

Hopes open source technology can further boost improving Twitter uptime record

By Eric Lul

Computerworld | Feb.23, 2014 4:50 PM PT

RELATED TOPICS

Database Management

Enterprise Applications

Ryan King, an engineer at Twitter, today told the blog MySQL that the social networking company plans to move from MySQL to the Cassandra database. For what he called its resilience, scalability and large community of open-source developers.

MORE LIKE THIS

The end of SQL, and relational databases? (part 1 of 2)

InfoWorld's top 10 emerging enterprise technologies

InfoWorld reviews Database engines for social networks